Algiers Rebellion Ends; One Leader Held, Other Flees

ALGIERS (AP) - The French insurrection in Algiers ended ingloriously Monday with one of the two leaders in custody and the other in flight

The last die-hards marched out of the barricades after getting a harsh army dictate to form a unit with the French Foreign Legion to fight Algeria's Moslem rebels or go home and face possible trial

Moving firmly to end the eightday uprising, President Charles de Gaulle's government laid down the unbending alternatives. They were relayed to the insurgents by a paratroop colonel at a meeting behind the barricades Sunday night.

A government spokesman said 420 of the insurgents who surrendered with their goateed military leader, Pierre Lagaillarde. agreed to serve with the Legion as a special unit. Gen. Jean Crepin. Debate Over The Two Kinds Of Gap

The American public suffers from one grave disadvantage in judging the current debate over whether this country's defenses are adequate to deter Russia or are woefully weak. The average citizen does not have and is not likely to get access to secret intelligence reports on Soviet military capabilities on which the Administration bases its decisions.

But the debate has been illuminating because it has brought out that there is a great deal of difference between the widely-discussed missile gap and the newly named deterrent gap. There is an equally wide margin between what Russia probably will do and what she possibly

There is no disagreement on one point. There will be a wide and alarming missile gap a few years hence. The Soviet Union, which embarked on a missile program several years before the United States, may have three times as many missiles as the U.S. does before long. It will also have missiles with a great deal more thrust.

It would be folly not to speed efforts to catch up. But the decision for peace or war may not be made on the basis of missile stockpiles alone. What is more important is whether the U. S. possesses the capacity to strike a crippling blow at Russia or whether the Kremlin fires the first shot. As long as America possesses this power there will be no deterrent gap and the Soviet Union may fear to risk a war.

In the opinion of President Eisenhower and his chief military advisers - an opinion not concurred in by Congressional critics - there is no deterrent gap and there is not likely to be one in the next few years. But it would be naive to contend that the U.S. has not made serious errors of judgment in planning its defense program or that there is no room for criticism of

Unless there is acceleration of the missile program, the Soviet Union's military capabilities will continue to grow more rapidly than those of the U.S. And in time there would be no doubt as to whether the missile gap had become a deterrent gap fatal to the peace and security of the free world.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

The New Expert

I have acquired the habit of turning to Jack Paar tainment, and those who paid as I undress to go to bed, he providing a fairly zany vaudeville show at that hour. Usually his program is not disturbing and thus suitable for one who expects to read for an hour and who eschews sleeping pills as

So I heard Jack Paar attempt to go political. He spoke on Cuba and while he has learned how to look almost sincerely childlike, I found it difficult to discover what point he was trying to make, except that he likes to go to Cuba and that the Cubans like him and that for that reason he is an expert on Cuban affairs and that Fidel Castro is a wonderful man, which did not seem logical. It is an exact example of bad thinking. I love to be in Peking and have had many friends there and some of them like me, nevertheless Mao Tze-tung is an evil tyrant. He is an enemy of the United States and his early assassination would disturb me hardly at all.

A man in Jack Paar's audience heckled him. Jack Paar's producer did not show the heckler; his name was not asked or mentioned to the audience; no effort was made to amplify his voice and Jack Paar had the advantage that he could grimace while his heckler talked. It was unfair. Furthermore, Jack Paar's punch-line question was quite stupid. It was the old gag, "Vass you there, Charley?" which proves nothing. The greatest astronomer that ever lived has never been on the Moon or on Saturn or Neptune. Thousands of tourists go to Cuba who cannot speak a word of Caribbean Spanish. I do not know whether Jack Paar can. Those who cannot speak the language of a people can have no direct contact with the masses of a country.

My colleague, Jack O'Brian, who reports on television, quotes Jack Paar as saying:

"I've read such untruthful things about what was happening in Cuba. Now things have gotten so difficult now it's hard to get yourself involved with your heart because you get hit for it, but up until about a month ago, the things that were being written about Cuba for the most part from my experience weren't true -

No political reporter would dare to make such a broad statement. Specifically what was untrue? Is it untrue that Raul Castro is a Communist? Is it untrue that Fidel Castro has conducted a blood bath on his rise to power? It is untrue that Castro has confiscated the property of American citizens and imperilled their lives? Is it untrue that Castro's "Humanismo" doctrine, as spoken in each of his speeches and as proclaimed in the various governmental pronouncements. is an adaptation of Marxism to the first stage of a Communist revolution? Is it untrue that Castro has whipped up the antagonism of Cuban masses to the

If Jack Paar can say that the questions I ask are untrue, I am prepared to give him chapter and verse on his own program, on condition that I am not interrupted either by his pianist or by his peddling of wares. Further Paar said:

This man Castro is beloved by these people and here is a history of four or five hundred years of poor little people with their kids living in dirt and now this man promises them something else ... We were needling that guy from the very beginning and I really thought it was unfair."

Lenin, Trotzky, Bukharin, Kollontai and all kinds of people in 1917 were promising the Russians "Liberty, Land and Bread." Now 42 years have passed. Do the Russian people have liberty? Did the Russian peasant get his land? What have Castro's promises to do with reality? Hitler promised the German people the mastery of the human race for 1.000 years. Look at divided Germany today and ask, what was Hitler's promise

It would seem to me that Jack Paar does better as an actor in a vaudeville show than as a political shill for an enemy of the United States who day by day is embarrassing our government. What Paar said did not come over too clearly because his technique is not suitable for political discussion. But what I resented, as a listener, was his improper handling of the heckler who was not shown common courtesy.

'I'm Turnin' In My Badge, Chief'

Administration Begins Propaganda Campaign On Alleged U.S. Strength

WASHINGTON-President Eisenhower has decided on a vigorous personal campaign to convince the American people and the world that we are catching up with Moscow on missiles. This was behind his speech in Los Angeles last week.

Ike has ordered all Cabinet officers who talk about defense to stress the positive side of our own developments in rocketry, and to emphasize that we are actually stronger - when all weapons are taken into considera-

This line, of course, fits into the Republican campaign. However, the President acted only partly because of political motives. The National Security Council, in a confidential report, had warned that Russia's spectacular rocket and space achievements were convincing the world the United States had become a second-class power. So the Security Council recommended a propaganda campaign to convince the world to the contrary.

Note 1 - Assistant Secretary of Defense Murray Snyder, chief of press relations for the Pentagon, has urged defense officials to hit back at newsmen who criticize defense policy. He suggested it is better to give vague answers and remind the press that President Eisenhower knows best about military matters. If reporters ask unfriendly questions, Snyder advises, officials should accuse the newsmen of

Street Confused

By Roger Babson

BABSON PARK, Mass.-Wall Street friends of mine who were be re-elected. For this reason, I bullish a few months ago, then sincerely hope that both the stock later advised caution, now write me that they are "confused." People who have visited Berlin. East Germany, Warsaw, and Moscow come back with this feeling: - Although Communism and M1. K. will probably go out of existence, yet the campaign to gradually eliminate private property is something you should not

All over Europe tendencies in this direction are observed. What is now going on in Cuba is a reflection of what we see in Italy. France and even West Germany. This tendency is beginning to confuse Wall Street, even the most bullish. They still feel, however, that if the evils of labor unions and inflation could be checked, then 1960 might see even higher stock market prices than have yet been reached. It is true that in the history of the most land seizures and confiscations of tangible property the land has usually been returned to the original owners. But where private property has been confiscated and then covered by large state-owned or municipalowned apartment houses, as in Warsaw and Mosrow, return of the land seems almost impossible. In short, there is a good chance that the sugar lands of Cuba which have been taken from American corporations will be returned to them so long as they remain farm land and are not built upon.

Wall Street, however, does not know whether it would be possible to return to their rightful owners the stocks and bonds which may some day be confiscated. No one knows, as not difficult matter.

I now see no possibility of such thought of it may be a reason for softening stock prices.

The sellers of stocks certainly appear more anxious to sell than the buyers are to buy. This is what the Street calls a technical with rheumatic heart safely do reaction. The Dow-Jones Industrial Average was about 600 a year ago. It reached a high of 678 in August and another high of 685 on January 5, 1960. Then it began to slide off and is now fluttering around 650. No one knows whether we are yet in a real bear market; but investors should surely sell enough stocks > now to get out of debt. The American people are much like a flock of sheep. When a few leaders jump over a wall, the majority feel obliged to follow. This especially applies to Congressmen, who should be our

"follow the leaders" in order to market and general business will continue good until after the November elections. Otherwise both Republicans and Democrats may make promises which could lead to seizure of the voting power of certain securities. This must be avoided at all hazards

Frankly, it was because of labor's threat to have the Federal Government seize the voting power of the steel stocks. Although confiscation of certain stocks and bonds may come someday, what Wall Street now fears is that union labor may try to force a transfer of the voting power of the big steel, motor, and certain other stocks over to the Federal Government and gain for labor direct representation on the boards of directors. The next step would be the confiscation of the voting powers of the big mutual funds and life insurance companies. Finally, I ask what will happen to Florida, California, and other states to which retired people are now flocking if our corporations are so handicapped by labor unions and inflated costs that they can make no money with which to pay into pensions? Those who are already retired, of course, have nothing to fear; the corporations have deposited enough money in trust companies to fully protect employes who are already retired. Both insurance policies and insurance stocks should be safe investments. These will be protected by Congress, whoever holds the voting powers of the stocks.

Debate Over The Two Kinds Of Gap

The American public suffers from one grave disadvantage in judging the current debate over whether this country's defenses are adequate to deter Russia or are woefully weak. The average citizen does not have and is not likely to get access to secret intelligence reports on Soviet military capabilities on which the Administration bases its decisions.

But the debate has been illuminating because it has brought out that there is a great deal of difference between the widely-discussed missile gap and the newly named deterrent gap. There is an equally wide margin between what Russia probably will do and what she possibly might do.

There is no disagreement on one point. There will be a wide and alarming missile gap a few years hence. The Soviet Union, which embarked on a missile program several years before the United States, may have three times as many missiles as the U.S. does before long. It will also have missiles with a great deal more thrust.

It would be folly not to speed efforts to catch up. But the decision for peace or war may not be made on the basis of missile stockpiles alone. What is more important is whether the U. S. possesses the capacity to strike a crippling blow at Russia or whether the Kremlin fires the first shot. As long as America possesses this power there will be no deterrent gap and the Soviet Union may fear to risk a war.

In the opinion of President Eisenhower and his chief military advisers - an opinion not concurred in by Congressional critics - there is no deterrent gap and there is not likely to be one in the next few years. But it would be naive to contend that the U.S. has not made serious errors of judgment in planning its defense program or that there is no room for criticism of

Unless there is acceleration of the missile program, the Soviet Union's military capabilities will continue to grow more rapidly than those of the U.S. And in time there would be no doubt as to whether the missile gap had become a deterrent gap fatal to the peace and security of the free world.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

The New Expert

I have acquired the habit of turning to Jack Paar as I undress to go to bed, he providing a fairly zany vaudeville show at that hour. Usually his program is not disturbing and thus suitable for one who expects to read for an hour and who eschews sleeping pills as

So I heard Jack Paar attempt to go political. He spoke on Cuba and while he has learned how to look almost sincerely childlike, I found it difficult to discover what point he was trying to make, except that he likes to go to Cuba and that the Cubans like him and that for that reason he is an expert on Cuban affairs and that Fidel Castro is a wonderful man, which did not seem logical. It is an exact example of bad thinking. I love to be in Peking and have had many friends there and some of them like me, nevertheless Mao Tze-tung is an evil tyrant. He is an enemy of the United States and his early assassination would disturb me hardly at all.

A man in Jack Paar's audience heckled him. Jack Paar's producer did not show the heckler; his name was not asked or mentioned to the audience; no effort was made to amplify his voice and Jack Paar had the advantage that he could grimace while his heckler talked. It was unfair. Furthermore, Jack Paar's punch-line question was quite stupid. It was the old gag, "Vass you there, Charley?" which proves nothing. The greatest astronomer that ever lived has never been on the Moon or on Saturn or Neptune. Thousands of tourists go to Cuba who cannot speak a word of Caribbean Spanish. I do not know whether Jack Paar can. Those who cannot speak the language of a people can have no direct contact with the masses of a country.

My colleague, Jack O'Brian, who reports on television, quotes Jack Paar as saying:

'I've read such untruthful things about what was happening in Cuba. Now things have gotten so difficult now it's hard to get yourself involved with your heart because you get hit for it, but up until about a month ago, the things that were being written about Cuba for the most part from my experience weren't true -

simply weren't true. No political reporter would dare to make such a broad statement. Specifically what was untrue? Is it untrue that Raul Castro is a Communist? Is it untrue that Fidel Castro has conducted a blood bath on his rise to power? It is untrue that Castro has confiscated the property of American citizens and imperilled their lives? Is it untrue that Castro's "Humanismo" doctrine, as spoken in each of his speeches and as proclaimed in the various governmental pronouncements. is an adaptation of Marxism to the first stage of a Communist revolution? Is it untrue that Castro has whipped up the antagonism of Cuban masses to the

If Jack Paar can say that the questions I ask are untrue, I am prepared to give him chapter and verse on his own program, on condition that I am not interrupted either by his pianist or by his peddling of wares. Further Paar said:

This man Castro is beloved by these people and here is a history of four or five hundred years of poor little people with their kids living in dirt and now this man promises them something We were needling that guy from the very beginning and I really thought it was unfair." Lenin, Trotzky, Bukharin, Kollontai and all kinds of people in 1917 were promising the Russians "Liberty, Land and Bread." Now 42 years have passed. Do the Russian people have liberty? Did the Russian peasant get his land? What have Castro's promises to do with reality? Hitler promised the German people the mastery of the human race for 1,000 years. Look at divided Germany today and ask, what was Hitler's promise

It would seem to me that Jack Paar does better as an actor in a vaudeville show than as a political shill for an enemy of the United States who day by day is embarrassing our government. What Paar said did not come over too clearly because his technique is not suitable for political discussion. But what I resented, as a listener, was his improper handling of the heckler who was not shown common courtesy.

So the Security Council recommended a propaganda campaign to convince the world to Angeles. Cabinet members and praise to the Eisenhower Administration—something he hasn't done at such length before. Some he didn't mention Nixon. Neithpress dispatches point out that er did Mr. Eisenhower. In fact, no 1960 candidates were mentioned in any of the speeches televised across the country. The whole thing was billed as "Dinner with Ike." and the occasion was used to emphasize what a good administration the Republicans have been giving the country and what a fine President Mr. Eisenhower has made. The inference, of course, politically speaking, was that the people should be urged to continue the Republican Party in power.

Each dinner had its own speakton dinner. His charm was the ers and entertainment, so the subject of favorable comment by banquet in every city was a full-fledged affair. The television before. He certainly gave full started at ten o'clock, Eastern political dinners go, this was a contrast to the Democratic Party banquets in various cities held a week ago. The Republicans made no sneering remarks about any of the Democratic candidates. Their criticisms were in general and impersonal terms - a very good example to set to their rivals for this election year. One thought crossed the mind of this writer as he surveyed the scene from the press table-if

$5,000,000 or $6,000,000 can be netted out of a coast-to-coast dinner, that's a simple way to raise a lot of campaign funds. The Republicans now are talking of Lincoln Day dinners, too. Maybe it's a means by which enough money could be raised to make it unnecessary for either party to accept contributions from big business or from big unions. The federal laws forbid contributions by corporations and unions, but the individuals in companies contribute large sums and the unions have "political action" committees that go around pressuring union members to make so - called "voluntary" contribu-

How much better it would be if campaign funds could be raised in small sums, not only to elect a President and Vice President but to elect Senators and Representatives so it could no longer be implied that a Congressional majority can be bought.

After witnessing the Republican dinner, it must be said that Republican Party workers have an abundance of enthusiasm as well as confidence. Judging by the many new faces in leadership -especially the younger Republicans at the speakers' tables on every side - there is a new "image" of the Republican Party abroad in the land

By Roger Babson

BABSON PARK, Mass.-Wall Street friends of mine who were bullish a few months ago, then later advised caution, now write me that they are "confused."

People who have visited Berlin, East Germany, Warsaw, and Moscow come back with this feeling:- Although Communism and Mr. K. will probably go out of existence, yet the campaign to gradually eliminate private property is something you should not

All over Europe tendencies in this direction are observed. What is now going on in Cuba is a reflection of what we see in Italy, France and even West Germany. This tendency is beginning to confuse Wall Street, even the most bullish. They still feel, however, that if the evils of labor unions and inflation could be checked, then 1960 might see even higher stock market prices than have yet been reached.

It is true that in the history of the most land seizures and confiscations of tangible property the land has usually been returned to the original owners. But where private property has been confiscated and then covered by large state-owned or municipalowned apartment houses, as in Warsaw and Mos ow, return of the land seems almost impossible. In short, there is a good chance that the sugar lands of Cuba which have been taken from American corporations will be returned to them so long as they remain farm land and are not built upon.

Wall Street, however, does not know whether it would be possible to return to their rightful owners the stocks and bonds which may some day be confiscated. No one knows, as not enough confiscation of stocks and bonds have occurred to provide the answer. A "hedge against inflation" may not be too hard to obtain; but "a hedge against confiscation" is a much more

I now see no possibility of such confiscation here; but the very thought of it may be a reason for softening stock prices.

The sellers of stocks certainly appear more anxious to sell than the buyers are to buy. This is what the Street calls a technical reaction. The Dow-Jones Industrial Average was about 600 a year ago. It reached a high of 678 in August and another high of 685 on January 5, 1960. Then it began to slide off and is now fluttering around 650. No one knows whether we are yet in a real bear market; but investors should surely sell enough stocks now to get out of debt.

The American people are much like a flock of sheep. When a few leaders jump over a wall. the majority feel obliged to follow. This especially applies to real stabilizers: too many of

"follow the leaders" in order to be re-elected. For this reason, I sincerely hope that both the stock market and general business will continue good until after the November elections. Otherwise both Republicans and Democrats may make promises which could lead to seizure of the voting power of certain securities. This must be avoided at all hazards.

Why was the steel strike finally settled?

Frankly, it was because of labor's threat to have the Federal Government seize the voting power of the steel stocks. Although confiscation of certain stocks and bonds may come someday, what Wall Street now fears is that union labor may try to force a transfer of the voting power of the big steel, motor, and certain other stocks over to the Federal Government and gain for labor direct representation on the boards of directors. The next step would be the confiscation of the voting powers of the big mutual funds and life insurance companies. Finally, I ask what will happen to Florida, California, and other states to which retired people are now flocking if our corporations are so handicapped by labor unions and inflated costs that they can make no money with which to pay into pensions? Those who are already retired, of course, have nothing to fear; the corporations have deposited enough money in trust companies to fully protect employes who are already retired. Both insurance policies and insurance stocks should be safe investments. These will be protected by Congress, whoever holds the voting powers of the stocks.

General Arthur Summerfield has gone in for automation of postal services in a big way. He has all sorts of complicated push-button machinery for handling and sorting mail and packages.

Not the least of these devices is a machine which vends various denominations of stamps and change on the insertion of coins. Summerfield had one of these little dandies installed in the Senate wing of the Capitol to replace the uneconomic humanstaffed office there.

To the Senators and their employes the machine has brought on nothing but exasperation and frustration. Most of the time its face has been turned to the wall like an errant child.
